This meeting, taking place weeks after COP30, will highlight key climate and environmental outcomes and focus on how to effectively communicate these issues and their importance to the broader population. Recommendations will centre on the ways in which climate action can drive improvements in social welfare, promote gender equality, and strengthen economic resilience, demonstrating the co-benefits of protecting the environment. The dialogue will also examine some of the most persistent climate myths and, through scientific evidence and strategic messaging, empower parliamentarians with the tools to effectively counter misinformation.
