ABOUT CCLW

The CCLW database builds on more than a decade of data collection by the Grantham Research Institute at the London School of Economics and Political Science, with institutional partners.

1. Originates from a collaboration between the Grantham Research Institute and GLOBE International on a series of Climate Legislation Studies
2. Since 2023, has been powered by machine learning and natural language processing technology developed by Climate Policy Radar (CPR)
3. Together, CPR and GRI maintain and update what is currently the most comprehensive global resource on climate law and policy, with over 5,000+ climate laws, policies and UNFCCC submissions from every country.

Key features

CCLW helps decision makers who need to access information about climate law and policy in order to do their jobs more effectively.

Goal 5 (Achieve gender equality and self-determination for all women and girls),

Page 22

Regarding the equality policy implications of this law, it should be noted that climate change affects women and men differently. In this respect, gender equality policy impacts should be taken into account when creating climate adaptation strategies. With its framework, the present draft law creates a basis for appropriate strategies and concepts that have a positive impact on gender equality against the background of climate change. This law is not expected to have any impact on demographic change.
